Half Moon, the luxury resort in Montego Bay, Jamaica is to build a collection of 30 ultra luxury villas, to be called The Colony at Half Moon, scheduled to open in late 2010.

The development will feature three, four and five-bedroom villas, ranging in size from 275 up to 500 sqm, with private swimming pools and ocean views. The Colony at Half Moon will occupy 14 of Half Moon's 400-acre estate. Work is expected to start in summer 2009.

The villas will boast a pavilion-style floor plan, oversized great rooms' leading out to infinity swimming pools. Indigenous materials will be used to create the interiors, including luxury en-suite bedrooms for all bedrooms, dining area, gourmet kitchens and outdoor relaxation coves.

In addition the villas will benefit from a full complement of staff including a butler, cook, housekeeper, laundress and gardener.

Richard Whitfield, managing director of Half Moon, said at the UK launch: "Our aim with The Colony at Half Moon is to redefine the finest in leisure living, by offering ultra luxurious villa accommodation combined with exceptional service, synonymous with Half Moon."

Guests will have access to all on-site facilities, including the recently renovated Robert Trent Jones Sr-designed championship golf course, golf academy, equestrian and fitness centres, dolphin lagoon, the Anancy Children's Village, 13 flood-lit tennis courts, watersports, bars and restaurants, a shopping village and two miles of beaches.

At the end of 2007 the resort opened its spa, Fern Tree and also unveiled six beachfront spa suites, the first in the Caribbean.
